

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An image photographing system capable of simply surely confirming a result of photographing when photographing an object and recording image data thereof, comprises an unit detecting a photographing instruction, an unit generating image data from an image when detecting the photographing instruction, and an unit displaying a screen configured by a first display area displaying the image, and a second display area displaying the image data generated based on the photographing instruction.

10